

Sustainable Small Scale Mining

The small scale mining in Greenland is strictly regulated to ensure a sustainable and ethical exploitation of the mineral resources. Among others, the small scale miners have to comply with national environmental regulations as well as work safety regulations. Work union negotiated minimum wages apply and no children's labour is allowed.

Only residents of Greenland are allowed to collect or export Greenlandic gemstones, minerals or rocks. Non-residents, however, can buy these from small scale miners or shops.

You can find more information about the rules and regulations of mineral resources and small scale mining on www.govmin.gl.

Buying Gemstones, Minerals and Rocks

This Buyers Guide provides you with the contact information to small scale miners in Greenland. The small scale miners sell a diverse range of minerals, rocks and gemstones. Some sell collector mineral specimens, others sell mineral rough, cut and polished gemstones and jewellery.

GeoTours - Collecting your own samples

If you prefer to collect your own samples, you can join one of the small scale miners on a geological tour. On Geo-Tours you can collect your own pieces of rock and bring these back home.
